Madaud. January 2.—Last night a band of aharchists from the country surrounding Xeres made an attack on that place, intending to pillage the town. The gendarmes, however, had got wind of the affair, and gave the maranders a warm reception The fighting continued until daylight, when the cavalry took a hand and captured a majority of the outlaws. Three of them were killed. The audacity of the affair has caused much alarm. The first attack was directed at the prison with the object of releasing the prisoners. A regiment of cavalry and a battalion of infantry are quartered in the town, and they found abundant employment in quelling the disturbance.

Death of Justin Waring-The Sad Story o

Suffering Related by Elder Minter.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Depatch.]

Dunssynle, January 8.—Mr. Justin Waring, of this vicinity, died at his home at 11 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the 5th instant; aged about forty-seven years. He leaves a wife and a large family of children. He was suddenly attacked with la grappe in the early part of last week, which carried him off very rapidly. His wife is also prostrated with the same disease and not expected to survive the attack. This is the third death from this epidemic in this vicinity in the last week. There is hardly a family exempt from its ravages. In some instances entire households are stricken down.

Elder Minter, who has been untiring in his pastoral visit, care for and attention to the six of his own coarge, no less than general, related last Sunday a most cal incident of one of bis calls on the day before on a family consisting of husband, wife, and children and his aged mother. He found the husband hardly able to crawl to the door to admit him and then stagger back to his bed. Upon entering the room, a truly desolate and drary one, the Elder found the aged mother stretched in the cold emprace of death; husband, wife, and children prostrate with this cruel epidemic, not one able to help to the other. This is a family of white, hard-working, and industrious people when able. Their neighbors, all stricken with the disease, were not advised of or had neither strength enough to render comfort or succer. This epidemic, for such it clearly is now, its prevailing to an alaruang extant among white and colored, and our doctors are going day and night, and all the time. Your correspondent has been confined to house and beed from 2th ultimo, his wife in a precarious condition from the epidemic. Nearly all of his neighbors—certainly in every house one or more—are down.

DEFRAUDING A WIFE.

By telegraph to the Dispatch-L

Nashville, Tenn., January 9.—Some months ago a miserly old fellow named Hilton, living near Franklin, Ky., found himself near death's door. He had quarrelled with his wife and desired to keep her from enjoying his estate. He made a servant bring him a nail-keg, which he placed on the fire. About this time a maiden sister of Hilton came in and rescued the keg, which she opened and found to contain $70,000 in bonds. She took these home with her for safe-keeping. Old Hilton died, and when an administrator was appointed his sister surrendered the bends, but was surprised to find that all but $17,000 him been stolen. Some weeks ago the City Marshai of Franklin, Ky., named Stanford, came to Nashville and cashed some of the coupons from the missing bonds, and was arrested on a charge of bringing stolen property into the the missing bonds, charge of bringing stolen property into the State. Last Wednesday unknown parties surrendered to Hilton's administrators $22,000 in bonds, and the case against Stanford will not be prosecuted.

He was a pathetic figure, that little chap, and every one in the vark was noticing him, says Caroline E. Pepper in Wide-Ancake. It was such a warm morning for December and the energy which he might have had if there had been snow on the ground became languor and listlessness. He at last set the big basket down and looked at it helplessly.

"Tired out, are you, my boy?" came a friendly voice from behind him, and the messenger glanced up at a distinguished-looking man.

I trust it was generally observed, and that rich blessings may flow from it through our blessings may flow from it through our ever-kind Heavenly Father. I also hope that on that day large contributions were made to our Bible society. "I am sitting in my tent, about twelve miles from our 'war home,' where you and I spent such a bappy winter. The weather is damp, and for the past two days has been raw and chilly. Yesterday was communion at Mr. Graham's church and he invited me to be present, but I was prevented from enjoying that privilege. However, I heard an excellent sermon from the Rev. Dr. Stiles. His text was I. Timothy, chapter ii., 5th and 6th verses. It was a powerful exposition of the word of God; when he came to the word himself he placed an emphasis upon it and gave it a force which I had never felt before, and I realized that truly the sinner who does not under Gospei privileges turn to God deserves the agonies of perdition. The Doctor several times in appealing to the sinner repeated the sixth verse; 'Who gave Himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time.' What more could God do than to give Himself a ransom? Dr. Stiles is a great revivalist and is laboring in a work of grace in General Ewell's division. It is a glorious thing to be a minister of the Gospel of the Prince of Peace. There is no equal position in this world. Colonel Blanton Duncan, of Kentucky, has presented me with two fine field- or marine-glasses. He has apparently taken a special interest in me."

Don't send me any more socks, as the kind ladies have given me more than I could probably wear out in two years. God, through kind friends, is showering blessings upon me. Let the soldiers have all your blankets." [This order was fulfilled, and finally all his carpets were sent to the army as covering for the suffering soldiers.]

"Don't trouble yourself about representations about your husband. These things are earthly and transitory. There are real and glorious blessings, I trust, in reserve for us beyond this hie. It is best for us to keep our eyes fixed upon the throne of God and the realities of a more glorious existence beyond the verge of time. It is gratifying to be beloved and to have our conduct approved by our fellowmen, but this is not worthy to be compared with the glory that is in reservation for us in the presence of our glorified Redeemer. Let us endeavor to adorn the doctrine of Christ our Saviour in all things, knowing that there awaits us 'a far more exceeding. WISHED OTHERS TO PRAISE HIM.

Let us follow the teaching of inspiration—Let another man praise thee and not thine own mouth; a stranger and not thine own lips. I appreciate the loving interest that prompted such a desire in my precious darling." AN EVENT THAT GLADDENED HIS HEART.
We now approach an event in the life of General Jackson which gladdened his heart more than all his victories and filled it with devout gratitude to the Giver of all Good. On the 23d of November, 1862, God blest him with a daughter. To a man of his extreme domesticity and love for children this was a crowning happiness; and vet, with his great modesty and shrinking from publicity, he requested that he should not receive the announcement by telegraph, and when it came to him by letter he kept the glad tidings all to himself, leaving his staff and those around him in camp to hear of it through others. This was to him a "joy with which a stranger could not intermeddle" and from which his own band could not lift the veil of sanctity.

A PEACEFUL WINTER. AN EVENT THAT GLADDENED HIS HEART.

and from which his own hand could not lift the veil of sanctity.

A FEACEPLL WINTER.

After the battle of Fredericksburg there was no other advance of the enemy during the winter, and General Jackson spent a peaceful but very industrious winter at Moss Neck. The winter quarters of his troops extended from near Guiney's Station towards Port Royal, and after providing them with shelter, which consisted of huts built by themselves, he devoted himself to writing his reports and to the general welfare of his troops, both temperal and spiritual, Particularly did he bend his energies towards disciplining and strengthening his command. The almost superhuman exertions in marching and fighting had caused many soldiers to absent themselves from the army without leave, and this was an evil for which he had no toleration, and which he made the most strenous efforts to correct. He was also greatly interested this winter in providing his army with chaplains, and in trying to infuse more zeal into those who were already in his service.

checking the already in his service.

ENCOCHAGED ALL DENOMINATIONS.

He encouraged all denominations to labor in his command, co-operating with each other in every way in his power. All he wished to know of a man was that he was a true Christian and earnest worker in the cause of his Master. Roman Catholies were granted the same facilities of Protestants for holding their services. On one occasion a priest applied to him for a tent in which to conduct worship with soldiers of his own faith, and Jackson, after satisfying himself by inquiry that be was a man of exemplary character, granted his request, and with a decision that restrained all adverse expressions against it, he added: "He shall have it, I care not what may be said on the subject." A Presbyterian minister, in describing a service held in the General's camp, said: "So we had a Presbyterian sermen, introduced by flaptist services, under the direction of a Methodist chaplain, in an Episcopal church. Was not that a beautiful solution of the verked problem of Christion unnon?"

HIS CREISTIAN ACTIVIT.

During this winter at Moss Neck General Jackson's Christian activity and spirituality became more marked than ever before, showing a rich ripening for the rewards and glories of the heavenly inheritance. To a friend he expressed his perfect assurance of faith and said he had been for a long time a stranger to fear, "because he knew and teas assured of the love of Christ for his soul; he felt not the faintest dread that he should ever fail under the wrath of God, although a great sinner; he was forever reconciled by the righteousness of Christ, and that love for God and Christ was nown the practical spring of all his penitence." He then arose from his seat, and with an impressive union of humility and solemn elevation continued, in substance, thus; "Nothing earthly can mar my happiness. I know that Heaven is m store for me, and I should rejoice in the prospect of going there tomorow. Understand me; I am not sick, I am not sad. God has great sinner; he was a

HIS MIND UPON SPIRITUAL MATTERS.

All his Christian friends observed this winter how much his mind dwelt upon spiritual matters, his conversation almost invariably drifting into that channel, and his favorite subjects were steadfastness of faith, diligent performance of duty, after invoking God's blessing and committing our canse to Him, and yielding a perfect obedience to His will. He loved to consider the modes by which God reveals His will to man, and often quoted the maxim. "Duty is ours—consequences are God's." It was a continued delight to him to dwell upon the blessedness of perfect acquies, cence in the Divine will. He frequently said that his first desire was to command a "converted army." LABEL YOURSELF. Yank" Comes Forward with a System

The latest from the brain of the inge-nious Yankee is even more practical than nious Yankee is even more practical than novel, savs the Boston Globe.

Day after day it is to be read in the papers that some unfortunate has gone into a grave marked "unknown," or perhaps some most prominent and respected citizen has suddenly disappeared from sight and gone—nobody knows where, the last, possibly, the sequel of the first.

Then, again, after weeks of auxiety and fruitless scarch, some friend or relative is frequently found dying or dead in some nospital.

Now comes the proverbial "Yank," and with a plan to alleviate all this.

He has appeared with an invention, if such it may be called, which he styles "A Perfect System for Identification." And truly, if it was to be generally adopted, i could but empty the morgue and place the "unknown grave" on the page of history only as a thing of the past.

Here is what the originator of the plan has to say:

"When Bob Boyd stands up straight," said a Black-Hills old-timer to a Boe man last night, "you see before you six feet of the nerviest manhood that ever drew fees for performing the dangerous duties attached to the office of sheriff in a frontier county. He has been several times chosen sheriff of Pennington county, S. D., and is well known to all classes in the Black Hills as a man who never flinches. Indeed, he has captured some of the most dangerous criminals that ever defied the law, and has many times sustained the reputation which gives him the admiration of decent people and the respect of the other element of society. But Bob Boyd once told me that there was a section of the country into which he never went without considerable trepidation. (By telegraph to the Dispaten.)

where on the foot-stool. About every other man is wanted somewhere, and he don't generally care to wait to see if the Sheriff is after him or the other fellow. He'd lots rather shoot the Sheriff than to take chances on being arrested. If I am sent over there I go, do my business, and get out as quickly as possible."

"Big Jim Ryan, a mountain of Irish grit and muscle, who knew no more of fear than a cherub does of corns, was sheriff of Crook county for several years. During that time Jim had frequent occasion to become social with the had people who live in the land between the Dakota line and the Big Horn range. On one of his numerous journeys east—he has escorted many a convicted rustler to some eastern penitentiary—Ryan gave me an account of the country that tallied so near with Boyd's that had I not known both men to be truthful and honest I should have suspected them of collusion.

"But everybody who lives up in that country isn't bad, by any means. There is many an honest man in both Crook and Johnson county, and the material prosperity of both is proof of this fact. Still these honest folks are made to suffer now through the evil-doings of the element that is perpetually engaged in conflict with the law. It is suggested, too, that the cattlemen have a sinister motive in agitating the question just now. Nebraka people can remember without much difficulty the struggles between the settlers and the cattle kings in the Flatte and Loup Valleys. Some folks think those things may be repeated in Wyoming." Captain Mitchell, commanding the revenue steamer Crawford, reports to the Treasury Department that a mutiny recently occurred on the American schooner Charles C. He then took them to Baltimore and turned them over to the civil authorities. timore and turned them over to the civil authorities.

A Greenport, L. I., special of yesterday says: "The Miantonomah left her anchorage in Gardiner's Bay soon after 8 o'clock this morning, and, after passing Gardiner's Point fired with the reduced charge of 1,555 pounds of powder, and the full 500 pound weight of shot, from each of the guns in the after turret. The proper arrangement of the water-valves for checking the recoil at the desired point having been satisfactorily determined by the use of reduced powder charges, two shots, with the standard weight of shot and the full service weight of powder—255 pounds—were fired from the after turret and three from the forward turret. One shot, fired at 3 o'clock with a moderate elevation, skipped over the water and finally seemed to strike the land far to the southward. During the fire of the service charges observers were stationed at different parts of the ship—below decks and on the superstructure—to note the effect of the concussion. Everything was found to work satisfactorily at all points after the heavy explosions, and the firing has been attended with no unpleasant results to the ship, officers, or crew. The report that several officers had had their ear-drums burst is wholly without foundation. A few more shots will be fired next week, and the monitor will then return to the New York navy-yard."

The paper had printed something he didn't like, and he was going to see the editor about it and thump the stuffing out of him, so he said. At the foot of the stairs leading to the den he found a small boy, who blocked his way, says the Detroit Free Press.

"I called at the house of a friend by appointment a few nights ago to take part in a four-handed contest, but some of the boys disappointed us, so we two sat down and had a little single set to all to our-selves—one cent ante and five cents limit.

"Well, we two played on for swhile without striking anything to speak of, when all of a sudden I felt a bite, so to speak. I had snagged a whopper, sure enough. My friend had dealt me a hand. I took it up carelessly and looked at it, and for a moment I was staggered. Dog my buttons if he hadn't given me a straight flush, and a king straight flush at that!

"I tried to appear unconcerned, and made a move as though to draw a card or two, and then I apparently changed my mind and concluded to stand pat. My friend took one card, and I bet the limit-five cents. He saw my bet and went five better. I saw his raise, of course, and went back at him with the limit.

"He came back at me, raising me to the limit again, and thus we went on until all the spare change we had about us was on the table—quito a respectable little sumand then, not wishing to take all the fellow's money, who could not well afford it. I concluded, as I had had about enough of the pic-nic, to call him and put him out of his agony, intending to hand him back

HE HAD TO OWN UP AT LAST.

"Absalom Carruthers," said his wite with the accent on each sylable for good measure, according to the Cincinnat Commercial Gazelle, "you were intoxicated last night,"
"Well. I failed to notice it."
"Everybody else noticed it; they couldn't help it. You were irretrievably drunk."

"Not by a jugful."
"No, but by several jugfuls."
"You're away off, Hepsy."
"Not as greatly off as you were. You tried to open the gate with your latch-key, and you fell over it into the grass."
"Nonsense."

and you fell over it into the grass."

"Nonsense."

"You came up the front steps on your hands and knees, opened the door, and inquired if Carruthers lived here. Bo you know that?"

"Bosh?"

"And you stumbled on a dark flower in the carpet and nearly went down."

"Not a word of truth in it."

"Tried to bang your hat on a fly on the wall and then asked where that nail went to."

You are totally hallucinated,"

"You are totally hallucinated."
"Why, you talked out of your ears, and when the baby cried on the bed you went to rocking its crib as hard as you could, singing. 'Bye. Oh wy Oh, Baby.' Recollect that?"
"Recollect nothing."
"I expect not, and you got on your knees and patted and rubbed the back of the hound worked in worsted on the rug in front of the grate, and said: 'Doggie, doggie!'

doggie!"
"I tell you I don't believe it."
"And you gave me a $10 bill and said I could get a new bonnet with it, and here's that bill."
"Something strange. That bill looks kind o' natural and familiar. But I wasn't drunk."

"Of course, it does look familiar, and you said to my poor, dear ma, 'Mother, you've got to stay with us till spring freezes over.'" freezes over.'"
"Yes, you did, Absalom," said the old lady.
"Ah-yes-I see; I-was-very-very-drunk."

DID HE TAKE THE HINT! At Any Bate He Took the Clock and

Spotled the Joke. Professor Green, of Brown University, was one of the best teachers in New England, but he sometimes became so much interested in his lecture that when the noon bell rang he kept the class five or ten minutes over the hour, says the You's's has needed in the kitchen for some time.

It is a very kind remembrance on your part."

The Professor then went on to finish a demonstration interrupted by the alarm, and the statement of the s when he dismissed the class. He also took the clock home with him, and the boys never knew whether he understood the hint or not; but the probability is that he did.

She Wanted Truffles and Ordered Them

She Wanted Truffles and Ordered Them Classically.

She was a dainty Boston lass with a soul above pork and beans, and vocabulary above the ordinary, and she carried them both into a Woodward avenue restaurant with her, says the Detroit Free Press.

"Waiter," she added, after giving her order, "bring me also a few tuberculous fungi."

"A few tuberculous fungi," she repeated, with a superculious elevation of her eyebrows.

"What's them, mum?" inquired the waiter, helplessly.

"What's them, mum?" inquired the waiter, helplessly.

This time she looked positively severe, yet withal pitying.

"They are a species of morbid extravasation of vegetable sugars analogous to oak-balls or nut-galls, doubtless originating as these latter from the sting of some of the insectivorous family," she explained, lucidly.

The waiter was paralyzed.

"What's the matter with you?" inter-

The waiter was paralyzed.

"What's the matter with you?" interposed his partner at the next table, coming to the rescue. "The young lady wants truffles. You had ought to been raised in Boston, like I was."

The customer was served properly.

A celebrated German physician was once called upon to treat an aristocratic lady, the sole cause of whose complaint was high living and lack of exercise, says the and Got a Fright, high living and lack of exercise, says the Chicago News. But it would never do to tell her so, so his medical advice ran thus: "Arise at 5 o'clock, take a walk in the park for one hour, then drink a cup of tea, then walk another hour and take a cup of chocolate. Take breakfast at S."

Her condition improved visibly until one fine morning the carriage of the Baroness was seen to approach the physician's residence at lightning speed.

The patient dashed up to the doctor's office, and on his appearing on the scene she gasped out: "Oh, doctor, I took the chocolate first."

"Then drive home as fast as you can,"
